

Howard University

Department of Sociology and Criminology

The Department of Sociology and Criminology in the College of Arts and Sciences invites applications for three tenure-track positions at the rank of Assistant Professor with research interests in the department-wide focus area of Race, Inequality and the Black Community that complements our three-research area clusters: (1) Health, the Environment, and Disasters; (1) Social Structure, Conflict, and Change; and (3) Crime, Justice, and the City.

We seek outstanding applicants with a demonstrated track record of excellence in research and teaching. Successful candidates are expected to develop vigorous, extramurally funded research programs in their areas of expertise, actively participate in the Department's teaching and curriculum development at the undergraduate and graduate levels, and mentor undergraduate and graduate students. Howard is a metropolitan-based university that offers opportunities for community- and policy-engaged research opportunities. Evidence of interest and success in mentoring underrepresented students is highly desired.

Howard University, a culturally diverse, comprehensive, research intensive and historically Black private university, provides an educational experience of exceptional quality at the undergraduate, graduate, and professional levels to students of high academic standing and potential, with particular emphasis upon educational opportunities for Black students. Howard University is currently classified as an R2 research university with aspirations and actions underway to achieve R1 status within the next few years. It is a residential campus of approximately 10,000 students located in the heart of the nation's capital, Washington, DC.
