

Howard University
Department of Chemistry
Adjunct (PT) and Lecturer (FT) 2021-22

The Department of Chemistry in the College of Arts and Sciences invites applications for part-time positions at the rank of Adjunct, teaching one or two courses per semester, and also full-time Lecturer, teaching four courses per semester. Qualified applicants will have a PhD and postdoctoral or equivalent experience, with a demonstrated track-record of excellence in teaching. Candidates committed to working with underrepresented minorities in STEM and non-STEM disciplines are strongly encouraged to apply.

Howard University, a culturally diverse, comprehensive, research intensive and historically Black private university, provides an educational experience of exceptional quality at the undergraduate, graduate, and professional levels to students of high academic standing and potential, with particular emphasis upon educational opportunities for Black students. Howard University is currently classified as an R2 research university with aspirations and actions underway to achieve R1 status within the next few years. It is a residential campus of approximately 10,000 students located in the heart of the nation's capital, Washington, DC. The Department of Chemistry has a deep historical commitment to the training of African Americans and other people of African descent. However, we actively recruit and train talented students from all communities at both the undergraduate and graduate levels. Through the American Chemical Society Certification Program, we are committed to training undergraduate students for chemistry-related careers and other professions. The Department offers BS, MS and PhD degrees in Chemistry. Current research thrusts in the Department include materials chemistry, environmental chemistry, medicinal chemistry and biochemistry.
