

Dr. Otto Stallworth

Dr. Otto Stallworth is a graduate of Howard University in 1966 with a B.S. degree. He attended Meharry Medical College and after 45 years of medical practice as an anesthesiologist in Los Angeles, he pursued his passion for writing beginning late in 2015, and was accepted into the Master of Fine Arts program at UCLA.

In 2018, Denise Nicholas, award-winning actress and author of the acclaimed book “Freshwater Road,” invited the doctor to join her Longwood Writers’ Workshop, where he conceived his memoir, “Are You a N*r or a Doctor?,” which was published in February 2023. To learn about his other books, go to www.ottoestallworthjrmd.com

In early 2022, Dr. Stallworth began a non-profit foundation, the Stallworth OhYes! Foundation, which awarded four-year full scholarships to students at Howard University in Washington, D.C., and Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tennessee, his alma maters, that began in August 2022.

